Dear Melissa Aro,

I am contacting you to update the graduation data, specifically the High School Noncompleters data, which was incorrectly reported for the School District of Coleman for the years 09-10, 10-11, and 11-12.

For the 2009-2010 school year, we had only one (1) student fail to complete high school—not the five students listed. Of the remaining four, one was a continuing special needs students who graduated in 2012 and the remaining three students transferred out of our school district. This correction brings our non-completion rate to 1.9 % (or 1 of 51 students ) rather than the 9.1%.

For the 2010-2011 school year, we again had only one (1) student fail to complete high school—not six students. Of the remaining five students categorized as non-completers, one withdraw several years earlier for home schooling, two withdrew and transferred to other schools, and two went on to graduate in the 2012 school year. Recalculation of these completion rates brings our non-completion rate to 2% rather than the 10.9% shown.

For the 2011-2012 school year, we had no non-completers yet three students are shown as not completing their high school diploma. Of those three, one is a continuing special needs students who will graduate in 2014, another graduated this year (2013), and the third enrolled in an alternative high school and completed the HSED in 2012.

Please note and accept these corrections to our data for the three school years listed above.

Sincerely,

Mary Uecker-Gluth
Coleman High School Counselor
