VOL. IX NUMBER 6

FEBRUARY 2021

Creating in the Arts

Newsletters for November, December, and January have provided learning modules. Visit these to explore the current Wisconsin Standards for art and design, dance, music, and theatre. Each content area explores the standards of “respond” and “connect.” In this issue, we are exploring the standard “create.” “Create” in each of the arts content areas means students will generate, develop, and refine artistic work. Page 2 of this newsletter provides four different modules that showcase several ideas for creating in each arts area. Visit your content area module listed on the next page to investigate “create” performance indicators through the activities provided. Consider how the module was created. The modules shared for November to this current issue incorporate several tools to engage participants virtually. I used Audacity, Pear Deck, and Google Slides to create the modules. Try these tools and let me know if you have found other online tools to support our learners in the arts. Be on the lookout for the standard “Perform/Present,” which will have modules launched in April. In March we will celebrate Music, Art, Dance, and Theatre in Our Schools Month. For continued learning, consider attending an Arts Education Professional Development session. Register online by clicking on this link. Thank you again for your work in arts education.

Wisconsin Standards – Create Modules

Visit the module of your arts area to investigate ideas on the standard “create.” Click on the image to participate in the interactive slides. The modules encourage participants to share ideas by writing, drawing, and sharing. If you have any questions about the modules or have suggestions for future learning tools or topics, please email julie.palkowski@dpi.wi.gov.
