

Blueprint for Change

The Legal Center for Youth Justice and Education developed the Blueprint for Change with 10 goals that set the framework building success for youth in the juvenile justice system. Within each goal there are specific policies and strategies within the benchmarks that aim for improving student outcomes. An overview of the goals and benchmarks might be useful in planning or evaluating your current systems of support.

Within each goal there are links to resources and examples of other facilities and institutions implementing programs that aim to meet the goals. A general resource page shows all of the resources from other pages and it gives a glimpse of the many resources and practices available to implement and support.

Make Your Mark

At the end of the 2017 Annual Title I-D conference we asked for your feedback. Please take five minutes to take our survey to give us more insight on what resources you need and what you want for next year's conference.

Cooperative Children's Book Center (CCBC)

The CCBC "is a unique and vital gathering place for books, ideas, and expertise in the field of children's and young adult literature" through research, resources, and study of young adult and children's books. The CCBC creates lists of books

(like this Science Fiction for Children and Teens) as well as specialized support of different literary styles and genres (such as this Graphic Novel section), book of the week suggestions, and video presentations on a variety of book lists. CCBC is a great resource that helps make a growing library for your institutions a manageable process with well thought out lists and supports. Their focus on multicultural authors, illustrators, and subjects can help you build a more culturally responsive library for all your students.
