

Too Long Didn't Read (TLDR)

Too Long Didn't Read (TLDR) is a free extension for the Google Chrome browser that will create a summary of any web article. It supports multiple languages including English, Spanish, German and French. You can choose from various versions of the article including 25%, 50% or 75% of the original length.

Once you have installed the extension from the Google Play Store, the icon for it will appear at the far right side of your browser search bar at the top of your screen. Simply click on this icon that says tldr once you have an article that you would like shortened.

You then will see a popup window that looks like this and you can select how much of the article you want to see. You can choose from viewing a summary or viewing a short, medium or long version of the article.
